If any misfortune attends tomorrow, lay it to the day—Friday and the twentieth of the month.

The state railroad commission should have brought their magnifying glass to see the central Vermont station in Barre.

One of the calm aftermaths of the San Francisco calamity is the declaration by a Superior court judge that the killing of Heber C. Tilden, while he was doing Red Cross work, was murder and that someone must be held for it. The shooting of this man by one of the city's guards ought to be punished by nothing short of long imprisonment.

A STRANGE CONVENTION.

District Attorney Moran of Boston accepts the Prohibition nomination for governor, stating in the same breath, however, that he is a believer in local option as the best means to control the liquor traffic. Moran might as well have stated in so many words that he wants the Massachusetts governorship and doesn't care how he gets it. We had supposed that the tenets of the Prohibition party embraced as their nucleus the prohibition of the sale of liquor by state law, as contrary to the town or city control of the traffic made possible by a local option enactment. Leavitt, if the Massachusetts Prohibitors are anything like their brothers in Vermont they are dead set against the localizing of the power to sell legally. With Moran as a candidate for governor of Massachusetts on the Prohibition ticket, the campaign will not lack for one ludicrous feature. It will be a picture of the head of the ticket turning its weather-vane due north, while the body, the Prohibition party, will be digging its way to the opposite point of the compass.

"RETALIATION" BY HASKINS.

Replying to the statement of the Burlington Clipper that "Barre turned down Haskins and supported Gordon," and that Haskins "retaliated" by getting a $60,000 postoffice appropriation for Barre, the St. Albans Messenger says: "The securing of the appropriation for the Barre government building had no relation whatever to the recent contest for the nomination for congressman in the second district, and Congressman Haskins himself would be the last man to claim that he had 'returned good for evil' or heaped coals of fire on Barre's head. Barre was trying for this appropriation through Haskins long before Gordon came into the field or was thought of, as we outsiders understand the facts."

The "outsiders" have got the facts straight; the securing of the appropriation for the federal building in Barre had no relation whatever to the nomination for congressman by the second district Republicans. The project for securing a postoffice structure in this city is several years old, and is as well started years before Congressman Haskins ever dreamed that John W. Gordon would seek the nomination. The appropriation was practically secured long before the first ebullition of a contest was perceptible. And the appropriation having been placed in the public building bill, Congressman Haskins was not the man to attempt to scratch it out simply because Barre saw fit to set forth the claims of Gordon for the congressional nomination. He would have shown himself to be a small specimen of a man if he had attempted to do so. And The Burlington Clipper does him an injustice by imputing to him the possibility of lowering himself to such smallness. There was no "retaliation" on the part of Haskins; it was simply the carrying out of a pre-arranged programme, which Haskins was very largely instrumental in formulating. The Clipper ought to get the facts before making its deductions.

AGAINST SUNDAY FUNERALS.

Vermont Undertakers Are Requested to Work Against Them.

Burlington, July 12.—The second day's session of the Vermont funeral directors' and embalmers' association included addresses, a boat ride and the election of officers. The annual address of the president was given at the opening of the morning session by M. J. Moran of Brattleboro. This was followed by an address by the Rev. G. W. Brown, who urged upon the members of the association the abandonment of Sunday funerals as far as possible and asked them to co-operate with the clergy in making funeral arrangements. President Eckelburg of the national association spoke briefly. The remainder of the morning was occupied by Prof. H. S. Eckles of New York.

About 10 people boarded the Mariquita at 1:30 and enjoyed a sail about the lake, returning late in the afternoon. In the evening another demonstration was given by Prof. Eckles, who had two embalmed bodies on exhibition. One of these had been embalmed for 15 years and was an object of much interest.

At the conclusion of his remarks the reports of the secretary, treasurer and committees were received. There was considerable discussion about proposed legislation, but the matter was finally left in the hands of the committee. Officers for the ensuing year were elected as follows:

President, J. B. Carrigan of Poultney. Vice presidents, E. N. Miller of Brandon, C. M. Edson of Williamstown, Secretary, A. E. Hale of Bradford. Treasurer, L. F. Cabot of Windsor. Chairman of executive committee, M. J. Moran of Brattleboro.
